THE NISONGER CENTER
BROWN BAG SERIES PRESENTS:
Why Some Children Fail to Develop Phonetic Awareness

Please Join Us:
March 8, 2010
12:00 – 1:00
243 McCampbell Hall

Presenter: Susan Nittrouer, PhD

Susan Nittrouer began tutoring young deaf children under the direction of Helen Beebe in 1972 as a college student. She received a Master’s degree in Education of the Deaf from Smith College in 1975. Among the places she worked as a speech teacher for deaf children were the Clarke School for the Deaf, the Montreal Oral School for the Deaf and the Framingham Learning Center for Deaf Children. In 1980 she returned to university to pursue a Ph.D. degree, and received it in 1985 from the City University of New York. Following a post doctoral fellowship at Haskins Laboratories in New Haven, Connecticut, she moved to Omaha, Nebraska to work at Boys Town National Research Hospital, where she remained until 2002. At that time she relocated to Utah State University to be director of the Division of Exemplary Services within the Center for Persons with Disabilities (a UCEDD). Currently she is Professor and Director of Research in the Department of Otolaryngology – Head & Neck Surgery at The Ohio State University.